FINANCIER WON AND LOST HIS MILLIONS

THOMAS W. LAWSON WAS NOTED FIGURE FAMOUS IN HIS TEENS

Made and Lost Large Fortunes Overnight—Carried Emeralds and Diamonds Loose in Pockets—Spent Millions on Home and Died Owning Little Property.

Funeral plans had not been announced Sunday night for Thomas W. Lawson, noted financier and author of "Friday the Thirteenth," "Frenzied Finance," "The Leak" and other books who died in a Boston hospital early Sunday after suffering a sudden relapse following a recent operation.

"Tom" Lawson, son of a Nova Scotia carpenter, began his spectacular career by running away from school when 12 years old and finding employment in the old State street firm of Stevens, Amory and company.

By the time he was 16 he was counting his gains and losses in four figures. At that time a "Western" railroad, now part of the "Big Four," was in financial trouble, its stock falling to $3 a share. His employers were interested in negotiations for the return of part of their money, which had been carried to Canada by an officer of the firm.

Lawson made up a pool buying stock at $3 and selling it for $22. He made $40,000 on the deal. Soon afterward he lost all except $130 in another pool. It was characteristic of him that he gave a dinner to his associates with this money, handing the waiter his last $5 as a tip. Luck soon returned to him stranded however, and by the time he was 20 years old, his bank account was close to six figures.

From then on his life was a series of ups and downs with fortune alternating frowning and smiling upon him. Huge fortunes were made and lost overnight. It is said in 20 years he made and lost $40,000,000. He carried emeralds and diamonds loose in his pocket. One story tells how he once produced 20 certified checks for $100,000 each which he had been carrying around with him and told his secretary to bank enough of them to pay all outstanding bills—then aggregating $40,000—and give him back the change. He is said to have always carried $7,000 in bills on his person. Mr. Lawson was said to have spent $2,000,000 on Dreamworld, his magnificent estate in Egypt, Massachusetts which included a village for his workers, a race track and the last word in stables and dog kennels.

"The Nest," a simple cottage to which Mr. and Mrs. Lawson often retired, adjoined the main building of the estate.

With the passage of years, however Mr. Lawson's luck seemed to desert him, his golden touch lost its Midas-like power and so in 1922 Dreamworld and everything with it went under the auctioneer's hammer to meet liabilities of about $225,000.

It was said at the time that this did not mean that Mr. Lawson himself was insolvent. It appeared to be ironical that the sale should have been consummated Friday, October 13.

After the sale Mr. Lawson disappeared from public view and there were rumors that he was dying. He passed most of his time living quietly in Maine and Boston. A year ago, suffering diabetes, he went to a sanitarium in Montreal and was reported to be on the way to recovery following insulin treatment.

Mr. Lawson was brought to Boston from Bar Harbor, Maine, about three weeks ago and on January 24 underwent an operation preliminary to another, which was to have been performed later.

FREE FOR ALL FIGHT STAGED AT MILLPORT.

Millport, the seaport of South Bloomfield, staged an all around drunk and whisky fight Friday evening and it took Sheriff Young and Deputy Howland and Irwin to settle the belligerents. All the participants were arrested and brought to this city and were taken before Justice Friece where they had a hearing on the charge of being drunk and fighting. The participants were George, William and Scott Seymour, Charles Willoughby and George Snell. Scott Seymour and Willoughby plead guilty and were each given a fine of $10 and costs. George and William Seymour were released on a $300 bond. George Snell plead not guilty.

Navy's Aircraft Squadrons Start for Pacific

The largest overseas embarkation ever attempted by the United States navy bureau of aeronautics, the scouting fleet aircraft squadrons from Hampton Roads, Va., numbering over a thousand officers and men with more than 60 planes of all types, have sailed to join the Pacific fleet in joint maneuvers at Hawaii. This is the first time the air squadron has made such a long trip and the planes to be used have been placed aboard the U. S. S. Wright and the U. S. S. Jason, the tenders and mother ships of the naval air squadron. The picture shows one of the torpedo planes being placed aboard the Jason.

NEW DOG OFFICER

Stephen Washburn has been appointed by Sheriff Young to look after delinquent dog tax payers. Under the present law owners of dogs can be fined for not paying taxes. This is a humane law as it saves the lives of many dogs which heretofore have been killed when found without license protection.

The licenses can be secured at the office of County Auditor Bryce Briggs.

CLOSE SCHOOL AS RESULT OF LEVY DEFEAT

Classes at Stoutsville and Oakland May Soon be Discontinued.

Three hundred and forty-three pupils and ten teachers will be affected when the two Clearcreek township, Fairfield county, school are closed down because of lack of funds. Classes at Oakland school and Stoutsville high school will be discontinued probably for the rest of the year.

The lack of funds resulted from the defeat of a three mill levy which the township voted on at the last election. A meeting of Clearcreek board of education was held Tuesday night, but no relief was found available and unless the Williams bill is approved by the Ohio legislature, no aid can be obtained from the state, which would have assisted in financing the schools had the levy been passed.

Teachers in the Clearcreek township schools are P. C. Millnor, superintendent, Worthy Dyson, Isle Stewart, Jeanette Frease, Esther Fosnaugh, Louella Barr, R. L. BaBrton, Helen Valentine, Darletta Fosnaugh and Harold Pinches.

Akron, Feb. 9—Tom McShaffrey, con tractor, went on trial today on charges of using inferior materials in Summit county highways. It is alleged that he defrauded the county taxpayers out of almost $400,000 thru faulty construction of roads.

MET DEATH WHEN AUTO HITS POLE

Philip Swick, of Columbus, Passed Away at Home and Hospital Sunday.

BLINDED BY LIGHTS

Accident Occured on the Chillicothe Pike Just North of Nash.

Blinded by lights from a car going south on the Columbus-Chillicothe pike Sunday evening caused the car of Philip Schick, driven by C. H. Smith to swerve, skid and collide with a telephone pole just north of Nash. Mr. Schick's skull was fractured and he died at the Home and Hospital at 11:15 o'clock that night. Mr. Smith was only slightly bruised and injured.

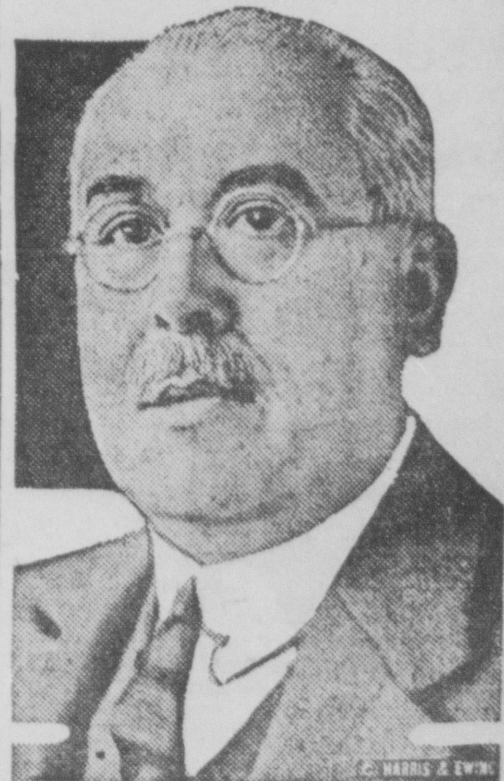

Mr. Schick was brought to this city in his own car by the driver of the machine and was taken to the Boggs hotel. He was assisted from the car to the hotel office where he collapsed. Dr. Dunton was called and administered a hyperdermic and the injured man was later removed in Albaugh's ambulance to the hospital.

The deceased conducted a grocery at 143 Thurman avenue, Columbus. His family was notified of the accident and they arrived at the hospital here Sunday evening. The remains were removed to his home Monday. He leaves a wife, one daughter and two sons.

Mr. Smith, the driver of the car, is employed in a garage in Columbus and he lives at 460 West Fourth street.

The machine in which they were riding was a Buick touring car. The road where the accident occurred is down grade and sometimes cars shoot thru at a terrific pace. A number of accidents have occurred at this point.

CIRCLEVILLE BOYS WHO ARE WITH N. & W.

The Norfolk and Western Railroad magazine for February, under a Portsmouth shop head has this to say of one of our former town boys:

"Stuart Walling, relief clerk at Portsmouth Shop, is looking for a buyer for a No. 1 Ford coupe. Stuart is willing to sell the Ford or trade it for a vehicle of any kind that will carry him to Wakefield. If anyone sees a young blonde sheik coming in on the Scioto Trail on roller skates, or a scooter, do not be alarmed."

About Knack in Making Tender, Flaky Pastry

Sometimes I have thought there was a knack in making good pie crust—some women born with it—others had to acquire this art by practice, persistence and with very much patience, says Helen Harrington Downing, in "Saving at Home." I think I belonged to the latter class. Even when I knew all the theory—all the whys and wherefores about making pie crust—the pies weren't so much of a success until I had plenty of practice.

There are two kinds of pastry—plain pie paste and puff paste. Most of us know something about making the plain pie paste, and few are expert at making the puff paste, although most housewives feel they haven't the time to devote to making it. However, when properly made, puff paste is a real delicacy.

We hear a great deal about the indigestibility of pastry. It is very hard to digest, since the fat in the pastry completely envelops the starch grains in the flour, preventing contact with water and with the digestive juices—and so only light, tender and flaky pastry should be eaten. That is why every woman of us should learn to make really good pastry—not pastry that just gets by.

The lightness of pastry depends on the air enclosed in it, and its flakiness depends on the kind and amount of shortening as well as the method of mixing it.

Any good shortening may be used—butter, lard, vegetable fats or oils—or a combination of butter and beef drippings.

The ingredients should be kept cold, although I have known some people to have good results by using hot water instead of cold. However, I have always had better results when using cold water and all cold ingredients while mixing. The baked crust seems more flaky.

Fur, Popular Trimming, Used on Winter Coats

The lavishness and ingenuity with which fur trimming is used on coats this winter becomes more marked as the season advances. The cloth or silk fabric of the coat is scarcely more than a foundation for the fur trimming. While this use of fur is more striking on day-time coats than on the metal brocade and velvet that abounds in the evening, it was used effectively in a formal coat. On a rose suede cloth coat a full band of white wolf mixed with black covered the lower part from about the knees down, and the same fur made the collar.

Although mole has not been one of the conspicuously popular pelts of the season, lately several mole trimmed coats have appeared. Green cloths are frequently mole trimmed.

A white ermine wrap was rendered appropriately youthful for the young woman wearing it, by the addition of three flounces in the lower section.

An ermine shawl heavily fringed in white was seen also, as well as a rose mink shawl, with four-inch band of transparent dull gold tissue the fringe falling from this.

A black cloth coat has wide cuffs and collar of natural lynx and a long rounded cape edged with the lynx.

Collar Lines Are in Variety to Please All

Collar lines vary, ranging from tailored, mannish effects in narrow lines, to diverse treatments of the scarf theme. One effect that is repeatedly used shows a formation resulting from scarf ends turned back from the front and knotted loosely in the back. This treatment occurs in cloth and lighter weight mediums.

In conjunction with the border described above, variants of the idea appear in workings of ostrich feather, and shredded tulle, simulating feather appearing in the formal wraps.

The finish is durable and lasting withstanding heat and cold, acids and alkalies, all of which are very destructive to paint and varnish. It only requires five to eight days to finish a car. After Sunset in the Tropics.
Apropos of the stars in the tropics, one is always told that there is no twilight in these regions. This is not quite an accurate way of expressing it. What is accurate, is Coleridge's line in "The Ancient Mariner," when he says: "The sun's rim dips; the stars rush out." He adds: "At one stride comes the dark." The moment the sun goes down, you do see the stars at once; but the darkness that comes is not dark; the red afterglow down on the horizon and above it the luminous, mauve haze, which is peculiar to the tropics, lingers a long time, and against this the great shapes of the clouds stand out inky and black. It is a wonderful sight.

KEEPING WELL
SLEEPING SICKNESS
IN JAPAN
DR. FREDERICK R. GREEN
Editor of "HEALTH"

THE United States public health service reports a strange epidemic in Japan. Up to date, there have been about 5,000 cases. First reported as meningitis, later as sleeping sickness. It is now considered a hitherto unidentified contagious disease.

The disease is markedly different from both meningitis and infantile paralysis. Males seem to be more frequently affected than females. It does not appear to be carried by contact since more than one case in a household has been rarely observed. The sickness begins with a rise in temperature, with or without other symptoms such as slight headache, sleepiness, and discomfort. Within twenty-four or forty-eight hours, during which the temperature steadily rises, nausea, vomiting, and sleeplessness may occur. Both the arms and the legs are paralyzed. The eyes apparently are not affected. The principal symptom is unconsciousness, which does not generally occur until the third or fourth day. The patient may be delirious but usually appears to be in a deep sleep, from which, however, he may be aroused enough to answer simple questions or swallow food.

In severe cases the patients die without regaining consciousness. In the lighter cases, the fever gradually goes down, the patients slowly regain consciousness and recover completely in ten or fifteen days.

So far, no germ has been found which could be held responsible for this disease. Animals, as well as men, are susceptible and among them the mortality appears to be very high. No one as yet has been able to account for this epidemic or to suggest any reason for it. It has spread over most of Japan but is especially prevalent in certain provinces. The only clue, so far, as to its occurrence is that it has been pointed out that last summer was exceedingly hot and dry in Japan, consequently very dusty, and that the epidemic came to an end following the coming of the fall rains.

Whether this disease is some modified form of the so-called infantile paralysis, which frequently occurs in our Western states during hot weather, or whether it is a new and entirely unheard-of disease, is still to be determined.

Bluestone Used for Sheep-Worm Control

Government Demonstration Attracts Many Sheepmen.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

A demonstration of the bluestone or copper-sulphate treatment of sheep for the riddance of stomach worms attracted over 70 sheepmen in Wapello county, Iowa, according to a recent report to the United States Department of Agriculture.

Experimental work in the practical control of stomach worms is being carried on by the department at Queen City, Mo., where about 2,000 sheep on a dozen farms have been made available by the owners for the use of the specialist in charge of the investigations. The problem of stomach-worm control has been under investigation the last eight years at Vienna, Va., and the copper-sulphate treatment is the most satisfactory means of preventing losses from stomach worms yet discovered.

After two years of experimenting at Queen City, Mo., Dr. E. M. Nighbert states that almost complete control of the stomach worms of sheep in the Middle West can be secured by the copper-sulphate treatment, and that at slight expense profits in the production of mutton, wool, and breeding stock can be greatly increased by the treatment.

Sprouting Oats in Bags Is Most Practical Plan

This time of year when green food is dry and fibrous, sprouted oats is almost a necessity for laying stock.

Two quarts of dry seed oats is sufficient for 100 hens. Place this in a thin muslin bag, made pillow-slip fashion and soak all night in a pail of water, tepid preferred. In the morning hang up behind kitchen range with drip pan below.

Each evening for five days, place a bag of the required amount of oats soaking; once daily dip in tepid water, shake and stir thoroughly to prevent heating. On the fifth day the first bag is ready to feed.

One good-sized pinch per hen is plenty. Sprouted or germinated oats should be fed in troughs or on clean boards as they are damp and collect dirt if fed in litter. Wash the bags in hot soapsuds and use over and over.

Sprouted oats is one of the finest green feeds if fed sweet and clear. Never feed if moldy, sour or smutty. Do not overfeed; feed regularly every day. They help keep the birds in good condition and make hatching eggs more fertile and hatchable. Commence feeding to chicks when they are one month old, feeding a tiny bit at first and increasing each day.

Protein Feed Lacking

Few farmers who are raising poultry on a comparatively large scale have enough buttermilk or skim milk so that they can supply the protein needed in a ration made up of farm raised grains by feeding these products in the way mentioned. They must, therefore, have access to protein in other forms if they would secure profitable egg production, especially during the early fall and winter months.

Thinning Sweet Corn

Three stalks to the hill is a good average number of stalks when growing sweet corn. Some varieties will grow from three or four grains as many as a dozen stalks. The weaker ones should be pulled out. Otherwise the yield will be reduced to small ears, or none at all. Three healthy stalks to the hill should average two to three ears to the stalk.

Sod in Orchards

Where the orchard has been in sod for several years the plowing should be shallow, so as not to tear up the small feeding roots which always come to the surface in sod orchards. Two years of clean cultivation will send the roots downward and there will be no danger of disturbing them. Afterwards the orchard should be kept in some kind of cover crop and in clean cultivation.

FARM NOTES

The good farmer is known by his rotation.

A dairy barn doesn't need to be costly to be clean.

Label your products. Of what avail is pedigree if its possessor is nameless?

There is no short-cut to ease in farming; but there are ways of making farming easier.

Farmers winter-feeding fat stock know that keeping them always just a little hungry keeps them on the gain.

Dullness is one of the most universally despised qualities, yet we sometimes see sharp persons tolerating dull tools.

While there is still snow on the ground, it is a good time to sow grass seed and up to the first of May. Sowing on the snow is now regarded as an excellent method, the melting snow carrying the seed down to the earth, swelled by the moisture and ready to germinate at the first warm spell.

Early "Rubber Stamps"

Rubber stamps were first used for signature facsimile during the Civil war, around 1860. Prior to that time impressions were made in engraving. Wood cuts were made, and then ribbons, similar to the ribbons used on our typewriters, were used, and the name stamped through them.

Honesty

Honesty does not merely mean that you will not lie with your lips or take somebody's money or property. It also means that you will do your very best in everything, do every task to a complete finish, and stamp each job you do with the trademark of your character.—Kiel Kraftsman.

Famous Greek Statue

Hermes, one of the masterpieces of Praxiteles, the ancient Greek sculptor, was found May 8, 1877, at Olympia. It is now preserved in the museum there. The figure of the youthful god is shown as the protector of his baby brother, Dionysus. The statue was made about 250 B. C.

Magnificent English Seal.

The high-water mark for English official seals was reached in the magnificent seal of Henry IV, which was also used by his two successors. The matrix is of gold and is a marvel of the goldsmith's art. Not only does this seal take pre-eminence amongst seals, but it is also often pointed to as illustrating the zenith of English art of this period. It was made in 1408. A Gothic framework on the obverse side divides with niches and canopies the space into numerous sections enshrining no less than 21 figures, besides the charges on the shields and banners. Herein is reflected the perpendicular style of architecture just beginning to assert itself. The figures all have a political significance to convey.

Alan Wyon, one of the most careful writers on the Great Seals of England, discovers in the work the desire of impressing upon the people the claim of Henry V to the English throne.

for a DeLaval whether you buy one or not—

If your separator doesn't skim clean you are feeding your pigs and chickens enough butter-fat—which is always the equivalent of cash money—to pay for a new clean-skimming De Laval.

We recently heard of a farmer who more than doubled the size of his cream checks by replacing an old separator of another make with a new De Laval. You may not get such an increase, but you will certainly get some when you put a new De Laval to work—enough to pay for it in a comparatively short time.

Bring in your old separator

We will accept it as partial payment for a brand-new, up-to-date De Laval—the separator with the wonderful self-centering bowl, that skims cleaner, runs easier and lasts longer. It pays for itself by saving the fat that other separators waste.

Wallpapers Painted by Hand.

The revived interest of American house decorators in the old-time wall-papers has resulted in a finding of some excellent specimens, put away 100 years or more ago in some attic. Eighteen rolls of paper were recently discovered in an old New England house that tell the story of Pizarro's visit to Peru and illustrate also the habit of the old-time wallpaper makers in going far and wide in history and geography for their subjects, says the Christian Science Monitor. These old wallpapers were often painted by hand or made by the old art of hand-block printing, although nowadays they are reproduced, literally or otherwise, by printing from wooden blocks. The Pizarro paper was probably brought to America as long ago as 1735.

London, O., Feb. 9. (United Press)—Mrs. Tina K. Strayer, London county's first woman judge, took the probate bench today.

Her first piece of official duty was to appoint her rejected husband to the position as her chief deputy.

Mrs. Strayer had never been active in politics until her husband was turned down for renomination as judge at the primaries. His rejection was an almost unheard of procedure in county Republican circles.

Mrs. Strayer went campaigning on an independent ticket with the second term for her husband as the battle cry.

She has been familiarizing herself with the work having been appointed the day after her election, by her husband as his chief deputy.

SOCIAL CALENDAR

Announcements have been received here from Sandusky, Ohio, of the marriage of Miss Frances B. Hamilton, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Hamilton, of Madison township, this county, to Mr. Hinton M. Waites, son of Mrs. Louisa Waites, of Cedar Hill. The double ring ceremony was solemnized in the Salem Evangelical church at Sandusky Thursday evening, February 5, at 7 o'clock before the congregation as witnesses, Miss Helen Peters of Sandusky, acted as bridesmaid and Mr. Jacob Kahler, also of Sandusky, was the best man. Rev. C. L. Kern, pastor of the church and also cousin of the groom, performed the ceremony and his twin daughters, Ruth and Naomi, acted as ringbearers, carrying the rings in the heart of roses.

Immediately after the ceremony, the bridal party was ushered to the dining room of the church, at which time the dinner was served by the young people of the Salem Evangelical church. The bride is a graduate of the Amanda high school of the class of 1919. The groom is a prosperous farmer, of Amanda township, and has been at home with his mother and her constant aid since the death of his father in 1917. The bride wore a simply made frock of white Canton crepe trimmed with crystal beads, carrying a shower bouquet of pink roses and fernery and the bridesmaid carrying a bouquet of roses and white carnations. Their wedding trip consisted of visiting relatives and friends and viewing points of interest in northern Ohio and Columbus. Mr. and Mrs. Waites will be at home on their farm, which Mr. Waites purchased over a year ago in Bloom township, Fairfield county, about March 1.

Mr. and Mrs. Nolan Sims and son Jr., entertained to a party Wednesday night. Those present were, Mr. and Mrs. John Baker and daughter Ruth, of Ashville; Mrs. H. W. Sims and son James, of Kingston; Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Thomas and sons Frank and Jack, Mrs. Oscar Turner, Mr. and Mrs. Avery Purcell, Mr. and Mrs. Ned Buskirk and son Charles, Mrs. Hattie Wallace, Mr. Fred Wiggins and Mr. Loren Kanode.

The evening was spent with music, dancing and playing games. At a late hour lunch was served and all departed wishing many more such occasions.

AMUSEMENTS

"Feet of Clay" Cecil B. DeMille's latest production for Paramount, which features Rod LaRocque, Vera Reynolds, Fay, Theodore Kossloff and Robert Fay, Theodore Kossloff and Robert Edson opened a three days' run at the Met theater yesterday. The story is an adaptation of the immensely popular magazine serial by that name by Margaretta Tuttle. Beulah Marie Dix and Bertram Millhauser wrote the screen play.

Traveling in its locale between a brilliant winter resort, a poor Harlem flat and a gorgeous eye-filling home of wealth, "Feet of Clay" is one of the most entertaining productions DeMille has ever offered the picture public.

The story starts with a yachting party at Catalina Island. All sorts of beach novelties are worked into a series of colorful scenes which in costume combine bathing suits on lovely girls with the latest summer creations of the modiste and the tailor. The eye filling piece de resistance is a race between twenty girls in jockey bathing suits on surfboards behind fast speed-boats.

Capping the beach scenes is a luxurious sequence aboard the world's largest yacht. It is amidst the spacious comfort of this three-hundred-foot pleasure craft that dramatic scenes occur, following a water series where LaRocque's foot is mangled in a fight with a shark.

In the story Julia Faye, wealthy half-sister of the penniless Vera Reynolds, has a "society cat" part of the sort which gained her such a reputation in "Saturday Night," "Triumph" and other pictures. She, her husband, Robert Edson and Ricardo Cortez, wealthy and in love with Vera Reynolds, form interlocking cogs in a plot which leads to dramatic consequences when LaRocque's foot makes it necessary for his new wife to support her husband. Misunderstanding is bred by the situation, which DeMille solves in a unique manner.

TRIBESMEN IN GREAT MIGRATION

Provide Modern Prototype of March of Children of Israel.

Washington.—Bakhtiari tribesmen, again in revolt against the Persian government, provide a modern prototype of the march of the Children of Israel out of the wilderness, according to a bulletin from the Washington headquarters of the National Geographic society.

"Only in the case of the Bakhtiari, who live in the 'Wild West' of Persia, their pilgrimage is accomplished every six months, and the trail traverses snow-covered mountains, icy streams, and other obstacles along what has been called the 'wickedest 200 miles in all the world.'

Thunder of Half a Million Hoofs!

"Along with 50,000 of the men, women and children on their semi-annual Odyssey go some half a million cattle. The tribesmen live on the cattle and the cattle live on grass. Only during the winter months is there grazing on the scorching littoral of the Persian gulf; and only in the summer months is there grass on the plateau country back of the Bakhtiari mountain range. Hence people and cattle have to move with the seasons.

"When the Bakhtiari knock down their black and orange and white tents to go in search of grass they pile their household effects on the backs of their animals, and atop these cargoes ride the lambs, the calves and the chickens. Their women strap to their backs their crude wooden cradles, in which they carry their babies and their husbands' guns.

"If an observer would get the epic quality of this mammoth migration he should station himself beside a stream—one of the torrential, icy-cold mountain rivers. First the tribesmen make rafts underlaid with inflated goat skins and on these they entrust women and children, the younger animals and their meager household effects. Then they drive their horses, cows and sheep into the swirling stream. The goats alone refuse to swim and, perhaps in return for the use of their dead comrades' skins, cross on the rafts.

"The roar of the falls above, the screeching of animals, the cries of the dying beasts caught in whirlpools, and the yelling of the men go to make up a din that is weird and unparalleled. Finally the men themselves take the icy plunge. This scene is not a matter of hours, but of days, and the crossing is continued through the moonlight nights.

Cross Snow Trails in Bare Feet.

"The next high light of the trip comes with the mountains where men and women discard shoes and break trails through snow-filled ravines and along icy passes, ever higher and higher, until, when the summit is reached, the weaker humans and animals have been left bleeding, freezing and starving on the steep trails. A panorama of the serpentine line, twisting and twining from the valley below, as far as the eye can see, is one of the most picturesque spectacles of human geography. The climax of the mountain climbing comes with the ascent of the giant and seemingly inaccessible Zard Kuh, some 12,000 feet high.

"The Bakhtiari do not bow to Tehran; they continually are at war with the Lurs and other neighboring tribesmen. They are ruled by tribal chieftains. Their men value women lightly, using them as beasts of burden, and pay slight attention to their daughters. Their sons they teach to shoot and swim and ride by the time they are nine or ten years old."

Bulgarian Moslems
Sacrifice to Bandits

Kirdjali, Bulgaria.—Curious sacrificial ceremonies dating back to pre-Mohammedan times recently were revived by the population of this district, incorrectly designated as Turkish because they are Mohammedans.

The occasion was the extermination of the bandits Ahmed and Mehmed by a government posse.

The Mussulman population went into deep mourning for the bandits, the chief feature of the mourning ceremony being the erection of several altars, somewhat similar to Jewish altars.

On these altars, with Mohammedan ritual, rams without blemish were sacrificed and a rite of feasting and drinking of brandy (Mohammedans never drink wine because it is forbidden by the Koran) was carried on until early morning.

The exterminated bands are regarded as heroes by this remnant of a vanished race.

Light Beam as Telephone Wire.
Dr. A. O. Rankine of University college, London, has succeeded in devising a method by which it is possible to talk along a beam of light—natural or artificial—using it as a substitute for a telephone wire, with a receiver at one end and a transmitter at the other. The operation of the device is quite simple. A mirror reflects a beam of light and by means of selenium and electrical apparatus the vibrations of the voice are carried along the beam of light, and are reproduced at the receiving end. It is absolutely impossible to "listen in," and only the destruction of the mirror can stop the conversation.

DO YOU WONDER

Why Rum Pirates Are Called Hijackers?—Here's the Answer.

The secret's out, folks! Most slang is mysterious in origin, but the newest addition to the language has been run down to its birthplace. The history of the word "hijacker," meaning a rum pirate who preys upon bootleggers, is revealed in this week's issue of Liberty.

"An interesting explanation of the origin of the terms 'hijacker' and 'hijacking' is given by officials of the Chicago prohibition office," says the Liberty account. "According to the Chicago prohibition office, the name originated from the methods pursued by motorcycle policemen in overtaking speeding automobilists."

"After following the delinquent auto driver for several blocks, it was a custom of the motorcycle officer to draw up beside him, exclaiming, 'Hi (or hey) Jack! What's your hurry?'"

"At the same time, the officer would indicate that the motorist should draw up at the curb until he could write an arrest slip."

"A booze pirate overtaking a rum runner in charge of a load nowadays races up beside and customarily says, 'Hi Jack, where are you going with that load? Stick 'em up and get off'n there before I blow your can off.'"

"Thus in the rum-running profession, hijackers became known by the manner of their salutation."

Elm Free Most Admired.
There is no tree in the United States probably which is more popular than the elm, and there is good reason for this, for it is extremely graceful and beautiful, says the American Forestry association of Washington. There are many historic elms, too. It was under an elm, for instance, as every school boy will recall, that Washington took command of the American army at Cambridge. Few trees in the United States have a wider distribution than the elm. One striking form of the elm has a vase-shaped top.

Denmark Has Oldest Flag.
The flag of Denmark, a plain red banner, bearing on it a white cross, is the oldest flag now in existence. For more than 500 years both Norway and Sweden were united with Denmark under this flag. In the year 1212 King Waldemar of Denmark, when leading his troops to battle against the Livonians, saw, or thought he saw, a bright light in the form of a cross in the sky. He held this appearance to be a promise of divine aid, and pressed forward to victory. From this time he had the cross placed on the flag of his country and called it the Dannebrog—that is, the strength of Denmark.

Byron and His Geese.
A general rationing of pets would have ruined a scheme of Byron's. With all his affected dislike of England, he kept up the old customs when abroad, and, in view of an approaching Michaelmas, bought a goose and fed it by hand for a month to make it ready for table. By the end of that time poet and bird had reached such a pitch of mutual admiration that the goose was spared. The poet thought it seemed lonely and bought it a mate. Then there were little goslings. And wherever the author of "Don Juan" went the geese were sure to go—in a basket slung beneath the carriage of his lordship.

Historic Stonehenge.
The old temple, now known as Stonehenge, has withstood the ravages of weather, time, and man himself for 35 centuries. The people who built it belonged to the neolithic period, or age of polished stones. Iron implements, such as swords and spear heads, were just beginning to be introduced. They were far too expensive, however, to be in general use, and the chisels used in cutting the stones were also of stone. These are found in great numbers near by, where the workers threw them after they had worn out.

REAL ECONOMY IN BETTER WALL PAPER

Good wall paper is the real thought of true economy. It is within the reach of every home owner. The total added expense of decorating a room with better grades is only the small additional cost of paper. The labor charge remains the same, hence the investment is small compared with the ultimate results. Be mindful of the fact that nothing stands out more conspicuously than wall decorations. Wall paper is the background and support of all the furnishings. It is the final touch in beautifying a home. Select the better grades and you profit both in beauty and economy.

Iron Pipe Makes Good Sprinkler.
Somebody attached to the Arroyo Seco library and playgrounds in Los Angeles had a bright idea. In order to sprinkle the rose hedges and vines in the grounds with little trouble, a three-fourths-inch pipe was perforated at intervals and placed on top of the fence. The pipe was then given water connection; and now, when the water is turned on, the entire hedge and border of flowers is sprinkled. Another length of perforated pipe takes care of the library terrace.—Popular Science Monthly.

Cheerful Word Means Much.
Have you ever had your day suddenly turn sunshiny because of a cheerful word? Have you ever wondered if this could be the same world, because someone had been unexpectedly kind to you? You can make today the same for somebody. It is only a question of a little imagination, a little time and a little trouble. Think now, "What can I do today to make someone happy?"—old persons, children, servants—even a bone for the dog, or sugar for the bird. Why not?—Maltbie D. Babcock.

When Names Don't Matter

By BAYARD D. YORK

(© 1925, Western Newspaper Union.)

"LIFE," said Russell Dunmore, "is a stupid, dull, wearisome—"

"It's your liver again," his Aunt Olivia interrupted. "The bottle of black pills is—no, on second thought, I believe this would be better. After you've dropped me at Mrs. Montgomery's drive out to the cottage and back. The drive will do you good."

Russell had come. And now, with the cottages inspected and locked up again and the October twilight approaching, he paused beside his car at the sound of running footsteps.

Suddenly some one screamed. It was a shrill little sound, promptly stifled—and followed by a few gruff words. Then the scream was repeated, this time with a wild, beseeching, half-crazed note to it.

As Russell leaped around the corner of the cottage he caught the words: "There's nobody there, and if there was—" and then he cut in sharply. "What's going on here?" he demanded.

The blood was racing in his veins. The young man before him was unquestionably one of the natives of the lake region, uncouth, burly, sullen—but upon the girl's face was the evidence of intelligence and good-breeding.

"None of your business," the big fellow said, in a surly tone.

Russell stepped forward. The other fellow gave no second warning. The quickly swung fist reached the spot which the point of Russell's chin had just occupied, but the chin was no longer there.

"So!" he muttered grimly. As the momentum of the unsuccessful blow carried his antagonist somewhat off his balance Russell doubled his own fist and swung. The big fellow went down.

He was up with a yell of rage. He seemed like some huge flying animal as he rushed toward Russell.

Again the latter's fist shot out—and again it reached its mark.

And now the thick-chested chap advanced slowly, with an eye of caution, and Russell knew that he faced the final test. His opponent's blows registered.

With one last desperate effort Russell tried to drag his brain from the daze which held it, tried to force his muscles into action—and failed.

Then something which seemed like a white cloud rushed between him and the speeding blow; he heard a little choking sob and knew that in some way, which at the moment he did not understand, he had been saved from the knockout.

Then he heard the girl's warning shriek and, glancing behind him, saw his new peril. A tall, long-armed man was running toward him.

In that instant Russell became a madman. With a fury such as he never imagined himself capable of feeling, he struck out with all his might. His fist reached its mark.

The broad-shouldered fellow went down—and lay still.

Russell whirled to meet his new foe. In the gloom he saw two other men approaching.

He felt the girl's hand on his arm.

"Better run for it," she suggested. Together they leaped up the path. He pushed her into the car and jumped in. As the engine whirled he heard a shout behind him. The car gathered speed.

"Think you can carry off my daughter—"

The voice was at Russell's ear. He turned. The tall man had gained a position on the running-board.

Russell swung his whole body around. The next instant the man was sprawling by the roadside.

"I think I can!" Russell muttered grimly.

Some eight miles down the road the girl spoke.

"Six o'clock!" she murmured. "I was to have married him at six o'clock!"

"With your father's consent?" Russell asked.

"That man isn't my father," she answered. "While I was at college mother married him; and then—then she died—and he—oh, it's all a horrible dream!"

A sudden wild spirit of romance seized Russell.

"Will you marry me—at seven o'clock?" he demanded.

The moon was rising above the tree-tops. When she did not answer he turned and looked into her eyes. She met his gaze steadily, perhaps a bit proudly.

Suddenly he understood. She challenged him to win her, not by caveman methods, but as a man should win the girl he loves.

"I'll take you to Aunt Olivia's," he said.

For a time they rode on in silence. Then Russell spoke.

"I don't even know your name—or you mine," he said. "But names don't always matter, do they? Do you know," he concluded with a sudden smile, "life is a mighty wonderful thing!"

Real Humility

A man in a train was accosted by a clergyman, who shook hands with him, saying: "Hello, Mr. Binks."

"That's not my name," said the man. The clergyman apologized and the man replied: "Never mind, I have shaken hands with a good man."

"Not at all," returned the clergyman.

Russian Villages Pray of Fire.
The Russian village is built principally of wood and roofed with wood, or with straw and stones. For this reason there are so many fires that, according to statistics, one-fifth of all the peasant cottages burn down every year, or putting it in another way, every house burns down after five years. This seems improbable, but it is reliable information.

Here's another gorgeous DeMille romance of married life which digs deep to the very bottom of human emotions.

The amazing story of a girl who goes from parties and petting at seventeen to marriage and responsibilities at twenty-one.

DeMille, supreme master of contrast, shows you the top and bottom of life—from opulent scenes in gay millionaire's resort and aboard the world's largest and most magnificent yacht to scenes in a cheap New York apartment and situations that tug at the heart-strings.

A picture, poignant, powerful, tremendous in its scope, superb in its artistry—dressed in all the glowing color and luxury that DeMille can weave like a cloth of gold.

Adapted by Beulah Marie Dix from the gripping novel of the same name by Margaretta Tuttle, but vastly amplified and colored to make it marvelous film entertainment.

You'll see

---twenty young goddesses of the sea, riding speed-churned waves on leaping boards behind speeding motorboats.

---jousting matches between beauties mounted on "sea horses."

---an exciting shark-fight that will make you gasp.

And hundreds of other scenes more thrillingly realistic and more sumptuously staged than any you have ever before seen on the screen.

Pest Made Useful

At the Pacific Northwest forest experiment station at Portland, Ore., a method has been found to utilize the energies of a pest. One of the expensive processes in paper making is the barking of logs, for no bark should get into the wood pulp. The director of the station, Thornton P. Munger, has recently been informed by Dr. F. C. Craighead of the bureau of entomology that beetles can sometimes be persuaded to perform this work.

"One southern lumber company gets the beetles to work, Mr. Munger was told, by girdling close to the ground the pine to be cut for pulpwood," the service bulletin says. "If this is done in the late summer, a multitude of bark borers and other beetles are attracted to the trees and in a few weeks have the bark so completely loosened that it can easily be slipped off when the trees are felled. At this point, however, the truce between beetle and forester is at an end, for logging during the winter following destroys the insects harbored in the bark, and this one abundant feast is their last."

Propeller for Skiers

Motorized skiing is a novel sport recently made possible by means of a small air propeller driven by a light motor that is strapped on the back of the skier, says Popular Science Monthly. The invention, from Germany, is said to enable an experienced skier to travel on the level at high speed. The propeller is started and stopped by a pneumatic device similar to that which operates a camera shutter.

Dear Sir:

A few words in regard to your Poultry Drops. My flock had a sneezing cold that developed into Deadly Roup. After I began with your medicine I lost only a few birds which were badly infected, the sneezing in the rest of my flock began to disappear.

In a few weeks' time there was a great difference in my flock of 200 English Leghorn pullets, they began to develop and get red combs and wattles. I am sure Fickardt's Roup and Cholera Drops will help in egg production, for a healthy bird is bound to lay if it gets the proper feeds.

Ned Saved Dad From Clutches of Highwaymen

By GEORGE ELMER COBB

(©, 1924, Western Newspaper Union.)

"I will win over your father yet Lella."

"Oh, Ned, I sincerely hope so! But he has changed—he is not like the dear old papa, who used to enter into all our joys and sorrows. I can't understand it."

"I can," asserted Ned Walters bluntly. "Your father was a fine business man. He retired too early in life. Idleness never yet suited a nature like his. The result has been—hypo-chondria."

"Oh, dear!" uttered Lella Taylor dismally. "What a dreadful sounding name. Is this hypo—hypo—"

"Chondria, exactly," nodded Ned. "A disease? Not in the true sense. It's fancy, imagination, but its victim suffers. A business man like your father finds himself at leisure, nothing to work for, nothing to occupy his mind. Result: the megrims. He gets all kinds of ridiculous ideas in his head."

"Well, papa's seems to be a new disease every day. He is crabbed and cross to all of us. You are the last object of his aversion. He has forbidden you the house—oh, Ned, hurry, there is papa now."

Robert Taylor came into view as his daughter spoke. She and Ned had met clandestinely at the garden fence.

There was a hurried exchange of kisses. Pater familias, looking strong enough to meet a giant, but wearing a scowl and slouching along as if his feet had dead weights attached to them, came to the spot where his daughter stood.

"Lella, who was that?" he challenged sharply.

"Only a neighbor, papa," reported Lella demurely.

"What neighbor?"

"It was Ned—that is, Mr. Walters—oh, papa, dear, don't be angry!"

"You've heard me say," snapped out Mr. Taylor viciously. "If I learn of your meeting that young man again I'll—I'll lock you up."

"Yes, papa," said Lella meekly, and went into the house crying.

For a week the only consolation Lella had was a note from Ned, slipped under a loose stone near their favorite trysting place—the fence.

One day Mr. Taylor decided to walk to the bank to deposit a large amount of cash and some valuable securities he had received by express.

For a day he groaned, growled and complained about the dangerous experiment when he fustily started out on his mission, he gloomily predicted a possible fall in the street—a dizzy spell—the probable uselessness of his lame foot.

Three nights previous an attempt had been made to burglarize the Taylor home. The faithful dog that its master had kicked had scared the intruders away. His own pet ailment instead of that incident was in Mr. Taylor's mind as he proceeded on his way. Instantly, however, the latter flashed into his thoughts as he passed a vacant lot two blocks from home. "Hands up!" sounded an ominous voice.

Three men had suddenly sprang into view from behind some shrubbery. One pointed a revolver at Mr. Taylor.

"Keep a look out," he directed one of his accomplices.

Then to the third: "Get away with the stuff," and the man addressed wrenched from the grasp of Mr. Taylor the portfolio he carried under his arm and started to move away.

"You keep quiet for a spell, or I'll bore a hole in you," threatened the first hold-up man.

He came a step nearer to his victim. Mr. Taylor was fairly terrified. However, the thought of being despoiled of over $10,000 in tangible property added a frantic desperation to the situation.

In pressing upon him the leader of the footpads trod upon his sore foot. A roar issued from the sufferer. He saw blood, he grew reckless. A frenzied impulse swayed him.

Swinging one arm in the days before he had acquired the whimsies of a nervous man, Mr. Taylor brought his fist with a sounding crack directly across the face of his captor. The men went head over heels to the ground.

The lookout sprang now at Mr. Taylor. The blood of the latter, however, was fairly up.

Whack!—he landed out that powerful arm of his again. He thrilled to realize the latent strength he had nursed. His second assailant went prostrate, stunned.

"Stop thief!" next yelled the retired merchant, and he put down the street after the fellow who had moved away with the booty.

The latter had been proceeding at a reasonable pace so as not to attract attention. The man turned the corner just as Ned Walters was coming around it.

"I told you I would win father over," chuckled the lucky Ned that evening seated in a hammock with Lella, a welcome guest and an accepted suitor now at the Taylor home.

Father was strutting around the garden in great fettle. He had rigged up a punching bag and marked out a running course back of the house.

"Son, Ned," he smiled expansively, "soon as I can get this extra fat off me, I'm going back into business again—with you as a partner."

Opportunities in China

Here are a few reasons that China is the land of opportunity for foreigners:

Electricity is just "coming in." In the past ten years 100 electric power plants have been built. Think for a moment of the electrical machinery and supplies used in America and then imagine, if you can, what will be needed to outfit a nation of 400,000,000.

The United States has 265,000 miles of railway; China has 7,000. When China begins in earnest to develop her immense resources transportation will call for enormous quantities of supplies and equipment.

The country is one of the world's largest fields for graduates of American and European technical schools. They will be needed to help China build railways, highways, water works, factories, power plants and river and harbor works.

And, with highways, will come the demand for automobiles.

Had Many Occupations

The Nobel prize winner in literature for 1924, Wladislaw Reymont, the Polish writer, started life as a telegraph operator in a small railroad station. Later he joined a traveling theatrical company and then drifted to other occupations, at one time being a railroad worker and another a farm hand. He once went to the famous Polish cloister at Czestochowa, intending to become a monk. His first stories were published in magazine form in 1893. His most famous work, the novel "Peasants," issued in four volumes—"Autumn," "Winter," "Spring" and "Summer"—has been translated into all the European languages. M. Reymont is wealthy and has an estate near Posen.

United States Leads

The United States is now using almost as much electricity as the rest of the nations of the world combined and the electric service station and power industry of the United States is growing more rapidly than any other industry in the country.

Point of Natural History.

Two small boys were awaiting their teacher on the sidewalk. One began to crawl on hands and knees, unmindful of clean white stockings, and was corrected by the other lad, but would not arise, as he said he was a lion. "Lions don't walk that way," said the second little fellow, "they walk on their feet."

Plain Statement of Facts

The Logan Gas Company Makes Explanation Concerning New Form of Rate Schedule Filed With Commission.

TO THE MAYORS, THE MEMBERS OF COUNCIL AND CONSUMERS upon the Logan Gas Company's system:—

On January 8th, The Public Utilities Commission of Ohio had preliminary hearing on the question of form and adoption of the proposed rate schedule of this company, of which you are fully informed.

While more than 400 letters and resolutions from 60 and more communities, from mayors, councils, chambers of commerce, labor and other organizations and prominent citizens, in all walks of life, were filed approving the 75c service charge one community officially filed protest.

The Service Charge is right, just and equitable and the commissions and courts of thirty-eight states have recognized it and legalized it as the fairest plan for the conduct of any utility business, because it distributes a part of the expense equally among those who create the expense. It also enables the company to furnish its products at lower rates than would be otherwise possible.

The Service Charge is now in effect in more than 100 communities in Ohio, and the number is steadily increasing as the propriety of such a charge becomes better understood. The city council of Cleveland but recently established by ordinance a service charge plus a minimum charge, for current from the city-owned electric light plant. Furthermore, in innumerable Ohio communities the descending scale of rates, with first quantities highest, which is in effect an included service charge, is in almost universal use by both municipal and privately owned utilities, and is willingly paid because it is realized that small use is unprofitable, unless offset by some such charge.

Unfortunately, a technical interpretation of the Ohio utility law opens the legal question as to whether the regulation of the service charge is governed by one or the other of two sections of law, namely, Section 614-17 or Section 614-20. The settlement of such a question would in no sense determine the justness or otherwise of the service charge we ask, but the litigation could be prolonged indefinitely, depriving the company of needed funds, and thereby delaying or compelling abandonment of development and drilling operations, and the demoralization of service to our consumers.

We know that the thing desired by the great body of our consumers is that we should go forward unhampered and amply supported financially in the effort to procure and prolong gas service. The insufficiency of the company's earnings—in fact, the entire absence of compensatory earnings upon a valuation basis, was most clearly indicated in the recent hearing, and there is still to be added to the figures then presented our heavy capital investment and other expenses since June 30, 1924. If we were to be deprived of the revenue obtainable from the service charge, or some equivalent increase in our income, we would be prevented from proceeding with drilling operations both in the new and old areas this year, as well as purchase of gas and the service next winter and thereafter, until such a time as financial relief was afforded, would be intolerably insufficient.

To avoid this delay, with consequent complications dangerously affecting the consumers' service, we have compromised with our own belief, the decisions of commissions and courts universally, and municipal officials and consumers in 67 communities we serve, as to the justness of the service charge, to the extent that we have withdrawn the schedule on file with the commission carrying the service charge and substituted the following, which we have filed as of February 7th, 1925:

"RATE—

95c for the first 500 cubic feet or less each month, from which there is no discount.
48c per 1000 cubic feet for the next 4,500 cubic feet each month.
53c per 1000 cubic feet for the next 5,000 cubic feet each month.
58c per 1000 cubic feet for the next 5,000 cubic feet each month.
63c per 1000 cubic feet for all over 15,000 cubic feet each month.

Subject to a discount of 3c per 1,000 cubic feet if paid within ten (10) days after the bill for the previous monthly reading period has been issued."

This new schedule is similar in form and substance to those now in effect in the large number of cities and towns in Ohio, both as regards gas and other utility service. It adheres to the ascending scale of rates, thereby compelling conservation in the use of gas. The revenue derivable therefrom is somewhat less than that which would have been obtained from the 75c service charge, and, there, it could be acceptable to the 67 communities heretofore favoring the service charge, and, also to all opposition appearing against it.

The new form of schedule eliminates the legal question heretofore referred to and the company, by filing a bond, may proceed to collect the new rates after the expiration of the statutory limitation, leaving the further litigation, if there be such, to be worked out later.

We are merely seeking some acceptable way to maintain our ability to serve you, and can not accomplish such a result without your cooperation. All forms of opposition or delaying tactics are distinctly against the best interests of both consumer and company and we trust we may have the hearty approval of all our consumers in support of the new schedule.

Greek Superstition.

So deep-seated is the belief in evil that even at the solemn ceremony of the Greek baptism, the priest and the godmother exorcise the demons by blowing their breath in the form of a cross over the baby and also about the windows to prevent the further entrance of wicked spirits during the ceremony. The sacred oil with which the baby is anointed at baptism must not be washed off until after 40 days have elapsed. This is rigorously observed, especially among the peasants, and the baby at the end of the allotted time is thickly coated with dust and oil.

DR. FREDERICK R. GREEN
Editor of "HEALTH"

THE radio in some form is almost as common in the home as the telephone. Broadcasting stations have increased until every radio owner can tune in on some station. One may hear, any evening, jazz bands, dance music, symphony orchestras and monologues.

Numerous health talks have been broadcast. Station WEAU of New York thought that something ought to be said about the teeth, so Dr. Richard F. Doran, a prominent dentist of New York city, was asked to tell thousands of listeners how to take care of children's teeth. These are a few of the suggestions Doctor Doran made:

The responsibility for good teeth rests largely with mothers, in the care given to children's mouths and teeth before they are able to care for them themselves.

Good teeth mean good health, strength and freedom from illness.

From the time of the child's birth up to the appearance of the first tooth, which is at about the sixth month, the baby's mouth should be carefully wiped out daily with a very soft cloth and warm water. When the baby is about six months old the first teeth appear. They are the two lower and the two upper front teeth. From this first appearance these teeth should be carefully cleaned each day with a soft cloth. Later on, a small toothbrush should be used.

As the other teeth appear they should be given the same care. By the time the child is two and a half years old all of its first or milk teeth, twenty in number, should have made their appearance. Mothers should teach their children to brush the teeth morning and evening and to keep the gums and tongue clean.

If the teeth were continuous and were perfectly smooth there would be no trouble. But they have numerous grooves in their surfaces and there are small spaces between them. In chewing, food is often crowded between the teeth or left in some of the little grooves. If the teeth are not immediately cleaned after eating, these food particles will decay, producing an acid which dissolves the enamel and results in decay of the teeth themselves.

Many mothers believe that the milk teeth are of little importance; that there are no nerves in them; and that their decay is of no importance. This is a serious mistake.

Decayed teeth cannot chew properly and are very apt to cause decay in the permanent teeth after they come in. Every child should learn to brush its teeth after every meal and to keep them sound and free from decay.

Helen's Promise

Helen had been brought up a strict Congregationalist. Last summer she had heard of the excellent preaching of an Episcopal minister, and she begged that she and her sister be permitted to go and hear him. Her father demurred; whereupon Helen burst forth with: "Oh, papa, if you will only let us go and hear him preach we'll promise not to believe a word he says."

Men Taught How to Cook

So many men are living alone in London that one of the polytechnic schools has started a cooking class to teach them how to prepare food properly. The classes are open to women also, as the need is quite great if those living alone on small pay are to be properly nourished. There are a great many more men at the classes, however, than women.

Polyglot Legislature

In the Swiss legislature members addressing the house may use either German, French or Italian, since educated Swiss are apt to know at least two or three languages. If requested, the interpreter must give the substance of the address made. Any motion or report is read in the two official languages, German and French.

Bird Hunts Snakes

The fanciful resemblance of the long feathers of his crest to a quill pen thrust behind the ear suggested the name "Secretary" bird. This bird's habits, says Nature Magazine, are far from literary, as its business in life is hunting snakes and similar animals. It is an African, and is one of the largest birds of prey.

Take Eclipse Seriously

Bread Well Preserved

A loaf of bread said to have been baked in 560 B. C. by an Assyrian housewife or baker has been discovered by a French explorer. The loaf was in excellent condition when found wrapped in a cloth and sealed tightly in a sarcophagus.

River Not Well Known

The American river is in north central California, rising in Eldorado county and emptying into the Sacramento river, a short distance north of the city of Sacramento. Gold has been frequently found along its banks.

Got "Fool's Gold"

Sir Martin Frobisher, the English navigator, although a gallant sailor, was no judge of gold. He was sent on two expeditions. In 1577 and 1578, to find gold, and on each occasion brought back worthless ore.

Poet Laureates

The naming of a poet laureate is an English custom. The United States has never named one, and as far as it is possible to learn does not contemplate using the custom. Several of the states have poet laureates.

Well, Isn't It?

A doctor, on being charged in an English police court with having obstructed a funeral by leaving his motorcar in the main street, replied that "it was his duty, if possible, to stop funerals."

Gibbon's Inspiration

In the church of Ara Coeli in Rome, on October 15, 1764, Gibbon, as he sat musing on the Capitol and the Forum, conceived the idea of writing "The Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire."

BURGLARS IN OIL STATION AND SCHOOLS

Prowlers Had Trouble for Naught As No Money Was Found.

The main filling station of the Columbus Oil company, corner of Pickaway and Ohio street, was entered by burglars Sunday night. The pane of glass in the door was broken by a rock and the burglars then reached inside and unfastened the door. The drawers of the office desk were rifled but as no money is kept in the office the burglars had their trouble for nothing.

Both the Corwin and High school buildings were entered by burglars Sunday evening. At both places the burglars entered by breaking panes of glass in the front doors and then reached in and unloosed the fastenings.

The locks and fastenings of all desks and filing devices and cabinets in both buildings were forced and the contents were scattered on the floors. The rifling of these compartments must have been the work of boys looking for money or valuables, but the nefarious work was all for nothing, as they contained no money. Some of the cabinets were destroyed completely in forcing the locks.

Test of Endurance.

There was no doubt in the minds of the Hobart family that William Comer Hobart aged thirteen, was a born orator. Uncle 'Liph Hobart voiced the general opinion when he said that he considered that William Comer was "equal to Dan'l Webster, allowin' for age. I tell ye what 'tis," said Uncle 'Liph to the assembled family when the grammar-school exhibition was over, "a boy that can recite 'Thanatopsis' from start to finish and only hold up twice, once in the beginning to swallow, and once toward the end to cough, has got real speaking talents." —Youth's Companion.

Superstition.

Everybody is superstitious and it is all right. At least it doesn't do any harm—which is the same thing. It is possible for one to carry his superstitions too far, perhaps; where superstition interferes with one's enjoyment of life, or robs him of something in the way of contentment, it may not be well. But it doesn't work that way very often. Generally our superstitions are trivial and do us no harm. To carry a coin in the pocket for luck; to comment about seeing the moon over the left shoulder; to refuse to walk under a ladder; to believe that it is bad luck to turn back; to make a wish at the appearance of the first star of the evening; to suppose it is not well to break a mirror—which it isn't well to do; to give heed to the thousand and one little superstitions which are entertained by the people, does no harm whatever. They are all part of the complexities of life, if you please, and if we didn't entertain them, why, we might be worrying about something else.—Columbus Dispatch.

China's Potential Wealth.

All the crops known to the north temperate zone are found in abundance in China. Emphasis is given to the rice crop, which forms the chief article of food for the nation. In many of the valleys are found vast beds of clay of excellent quality for the manufacture of pottery. The extent and value of China's clay is not yet realized by the world. For centuries the nation itself has been known in the western world, largely because of the excellence of its pottery. Added to these sources of wealth is the unrealized water power of China. The rivers, breaking through successive ranges of mountains, have in places attained a velocity sufficient to turn millions of spindles and to charge electric batteries with force sufficient to drive the modern engines of commerce with a velocity and power beyond all reckoning.
